Fast, friendly and delicious, City Edge is the perfect lunch place. There is a wall covered in chalkboard suggestions for sandwiches and wraps plus at least four fresh salad choices. Also soup in winter. Don't be put off if there is a queue; service is...very quick and the seating turns over while you are in line. They do a roaring takeaway trade as well. And if you go there twice, Tom will remember your name forever... read more. What her full grain bread is something I was looking for in a sandwich shop that is tasty with body, but still soft and I will probably come back because of it, but the sandwich did not live until broth. They have a lot of sandwiches on the board and many good looking things in the theke (and they make the sandwiches quite thick,) but the ingredients are quite standard in variety and quality and barely justify $9 $12 for...
