The restaurant from Fortitude Valley offers 158 different menus and drinks on the card at an average price of A$14. What Roosevelt Morisette likes about Nikuya Japanese: Japanese cuisine is very traditional, which is why I like it. It's nothing like typical Australian cuisine, whatever that may be. So to have a main meal tepanyaki style, accompanied by roasted vegetables was a surprise. Yes, I do like roasted vegetables, but I've...never seen these ever before in a Japanese restaurant! Maybe this adaption was made by the Japanese owners and chef to cater for Australian tastes? Well A... read more. The restaurant also offers the possibility to sit outside and eat in nice weather, And into the accessible rooms also come visitors with wheelchairs or physical limitations. What Concepcion Marvin doesn't like about Nikuya Japanese: Food was ok although overpriced, took forever for the meals to come out. One meal came out approximately 20 minutes before the other two did. I had to ask where the other two were which came out however we received no apology or acknowledgement of this. My meal was also cold, seemed as though it had been sitting there waiting. I would not go here again, there are plenty of Japanese restaurants in this vicinity whom h... read more. With a large selection of fresh vegetables, fish and meat, the Nikuya Japanese from Fortitude Valley prepares easy-to-digest, delicious Japanese menus, You can take a break at the bar with a cool beer or other alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks. The Asian fusion cuisine is also an important part of Nikuya Japanese. Anyone who finds the usual and generally known meals too boring should approach with a willingness to experiment and try some unexpected combination of ingredients consume, and you may look forward to the tasty classic seafood cuisine.
