The Spanish Garden Restaurant at the Breakfast Creek Hotel in Brisbane has long been considered a local institution, but recent reviews suggest that its glory days may have passed. While some customers were disappointed with undercooked or tasteless steaks, lackluster salads, and issues with the billing process, others found the food to be well-cooked and enjoyable. The historic charm of the venue and unique experiences such as beer served from a wooden keg add to the overall atmosphere. If looking for a casual dining spot with a nostalgic touch and classic pub fare, the Breakfast Creek Hotel offers a unique charm worth experiencing.
