The greetings were warm, the restaurant cosy and sun filled, the menu interesting and the food above expectations. It's not licensed and doesn't cater for alcohol but there's a range of lovely drinks, including a great chai latté. The dishes are genuine middle eastern, predominantly Lebanese. I recommend the shared platter. You can also buy take away meals and cakes. I'll be going back. read more. I thought this would be a nice cafe to try out for lunch because I read nothing but good reviews online but today was not our day. We waited an hour for our lunch and when it came we were too hungry to enjoy it. I found it also really distracting having three tables around us in the same position waiting for their food. You could tell everyone was waiting a while and unfortunately I won't be coming back. The food was... read more.
