This place serves almost identical idli and Dosa as the Original Mylari Vinakaya. Their Dosa is creamy and melts in your tongue. We went on Sunday and it was super crowded. We waited for about 15 minutes to get a seat. There is no token system. You just have to be near a table to wait for people to finish. Grab the table once they are done. That's the rush on weekends. So, avoid weekends if possible. The word Mylari... read more. What a quintessential darshini with minimalistic space still a comfortable ambiente. eating here has a homemade warmth. they offer limited seating opportunities, and most of the time the place is overcrowded. but eating that they serve is worth waiting. extremely pocket-friendly.

Binod Kakar doesn't like about Mylary Agrahara:
