one of my favorite restaurants in the subway. I have enjoyed the eating experience here. I love their fresh lumps, seafood and crispy pata. the portions are good to share at a reasonable price. if they want authentic Filipino dishes best, they have to try nowhere else. There was a weird odor when we asked for a reservation at noon. At dinner, it was still there. Our pancit bihon was served when we were done with dinner. Those are just two negatives though. All things considered. It was a pretty solid dining experience. I'd go back. View all feedback.
